In Appreciation

"Better than the last. Better than ever before."

That is the general comment on the Bach Festival. I have not been able to attend those that have gone before, but I was fortunate enough to attend this one and I found the concerts enjoyable, the B Minor Mass dramatic, exciting, beautiful. It moved me more than I wish to express as I am distrustful of superlatives. This much I am certain of, nothing over which I have any control will keep me from being in the Old Mission next year to hear and feel again the emotional impact of the Bach Festival B Minor Mass.

Along with hundreds of others, I am grateful to Dene Denny and Hazel Watrous for creating the Bach Festival. I share the community pride in this annual week of fine music. It is a large undertaking that demands of its producers a blending of artistic judgment, organization, ability and business sense, and this year especially, courage.

When other communities, discouraged by war-time restrictions, discontinued their annual festivals and fairs, Carmel's Bach Festival not only was presented according to schedule but proved to be better than ever before.

We have cause to be proud, and grateful.

Pretty Good Not Enough

On August 18 Carmel votes on a $10,000 bond election for a new fire engine.

The city already has one pretty-good fire engine and another that is good for nothing. In another

Letter Assures Hobby Place to Soldier Artists

At the request of the committee in charge of the soldiers' art show, last week's issue of the Pine Cone Cymbal carried an appeal for assistance in establishing a hobby room for soldiers here in Carmel, a place where they could work at their skills and keep their talents alive, also a place where they could exhibit their pictures and handicrafts.

A few hours after publication, Edward Kuster came forward to offer the lobby of his Golden

Police Deal With Lively Miscellany of Misbehavior

In addition to looking for the people who had the bad taste to steal the head off the statue loaned the city in honor of the Bach Festival, the Carmel police have had a few items of routine work to handle this month.

Fourteen drunks were booked. "And we have to handle about ten drunks to every one we book," Acting Police Chief Les Overhulse observed wearily in checking over the records. "Some aren't so far gone that they can't be put in a taxi and carted home. Others can be taken care of by their friends. Then there is a big percentage turned over to the military police. In any case, we keep them off the streets."

Fifty-seven traffic violations received citations and ultimately had to face City Judge Ross.

There was the usual number of people who thought the Twelfth Naval District was kidding about the dim out, so that the police

Deer Season Called Off at Last Moment

Sad news for the deer hunters who were packing their kits for the season's opening tomorrow, is the word brought The Pine Cone by Lloyd Lemon that there will be no deer season this year.

After extensive investigation, the government has called it off as a fire prevention-defense measure.

League's Bid to Political Rally Gets Response

Telegrams are arriving at the League of Women Voters headquarters from district political candidates accepting the League's invitation to take part in a debate on the Monterey Peninsula before the Aug. 25 primary election.

Two congressional candidates have already answered, assuring their appearance.

The political rally will be staged in the Memory Garden, Monterey, during the third week in August.

It will be an afternoon affair

Barney Lee Happy Overhulse Thinks on Prison Visit

Fred Bechdolt and Les Overhulse, acting chief of police, visiting San Quentin Prison recently, saw and talked with 14-year-old Barney Lee, convicted in Salinas of the murder of his uncle.

The boy says he likes prison life and Overhulse received the impression that Barney Lee does not want to leave San Quentin. He is a helper in the hospital, work he finds interesting, and his small size shoes are custom made in the prison shop. The other prisoners treat him like a mascot.

Overhulse was much impressed with the humanity of the prison under Warden Clinton T. Duffy. Defense work, such as electric welding, ship fitting and even designing, is being taught the prisoners. There is a new canteen, stocked with ice cream, candy and cigarettes, where the men may shop with the money they earn from handicrafts.

Over-crowded conditions have been reduced—from 6000 men to the present 3800. There is a radio in each cell and the dungeon has been changed into a storeroom. Punishment under the new system means a loss of privileges.

Bufano's Bach Vandals Still Unapprehended

As the Pine Cone Cymbal goes to press the Carmel Police and the F. B. I. have made no arrest in connection with the theft of the head of Bufano's Bach Statue stolen from the Devendorf Plaza early Saturday morning.

The statue with a twelve foot body of stainless steel and a head of blue granite, made by members of N. Y. A. under the direction of Beniamino Bufano, had been loaned to the city for the Bach Festival week and was to have been formally unveiled the afternoon of the day the act of vandalism took place.

Villagers Want New Firetruck; See Vital Need

Carmel needs a new fire engine, and leaders in the town's affairs welcome the $10,000 bond election that is to be held August 18 to finance it, according to a sampling of public opinion conducted this week by the Pine Cone Cymbal.

Contrary to the usual reaction to bond elections, this one is favored because the thoughtful and fore-sighted are convinced of its necessity.

Mayor Keith Evans, speaking for the city government, says:

"We have the finest volunteer fire department on the Pacific Coast. We have one of the oldest fire engines west of the Rocky Mountains—just as out-dated as any horse and buggy, and if it should break down now—which is very likely—we would be forced to have parts made especially for it. For the very limited amount a new fire engine would cost, to try to get along without it is a big risk to take in these times."

From a man usually chary of expressing himself on public issues comes the statement:

"Two times in another town the size of Carmel, I was completely burned out because of insufficient fire fighting equipment. After the fire they bought the equipment. I believe in adequate fire protection." Judge George P. Ross.

"Normally I do not favor bond issues that increase taxes on real estate," Corum Jackson, President of the Monterey Peninsula Realty Board, says "But in this particular instance in the interest of security to property, I am very much in favor of the issue."

Charles Watson, nurseryman and property owner: "I was a fireman myself for eight years in the oil fields near Bakersfield, and I appreciate what firemen have to contend with. I believe in furnishing them with the equipment they need. And as a property owner, I am willing to bear my share of the cost."

E. H. Ewig, real estate, Commander of American Legion: "The increase in taxes will be negligible in comparison with the increased facilities and reduction of hazards. It is mighty cheap insurance."

"Our greatest danger here is from fire," according to General Hand, representative of still another group in the community, "and I believe we should have all necessary equipment to fight it."

"I think we need it very badly."

Julius Caesar Opens Next Week On Forest Stage

Once again the Forest Theatre resounds to the clear voices of the Shakespeare players as nightly rehearsals go into high speed on the great open-air stage. Under the able and experienced direction of Herbert Heron the cast of Julius Caesar is being fused into its final form, for presentation in three twilight performances in the Forest Theatre, August 7, 8, 9.

The distinguished role of Brutus is played by Noel Sullivan, always one of the lights of the Shakespeare Festivals. Warren Keith Thomas, a young actor of talent and experience, has the role of Cassius. Heron plays Marc Antony, as in the former Forest Theater production. The title role of the great Roman general and statesman is taken by W. B. Williams, a player of sure ability and deep understanding. Casca, enacted by Milton Stitt, becomes in his hands a breathing, human part of the famous conspiracy. Robert Anderson makes of Decius a subtle

By ELIZABETH PAINE

In a conversation with Laidlaw Williams, vice-president of the Monterey Peninsula Audobon Society, a new world comes to life before your eyes.

Suddenly you behold a quite separate society from ours — complex, of ancient traditions and extraordinarily well behaved.

It is a busy world which all at once comes into being around one, and, at this moment, it is fascinating. While one may know a great deal about it, he is inclined to forget this other organization in the press of his own social frictions, and if he has never seen this neighboring society, the first glimpse will delight and refresh one for a return to human problems.

Birds Good for War Neurosis

As Williams says, in war-time particularly, we can find real escape in looking at the birds' set-up. Through them we may achieve recreation and deep satisfaction.

And the bird world is especially fascinating just at this time because the stupendous fall migrations begin in July and any day we may see seven-inch surf-birds which will be coming in from Alaska where, 12,000 feet in the air, on the slopes of Mt. McKinley, they have been bringing up families.

Or down on the river we may look for the bobbing little Northern Phalarope who has been spending his summer on Arctic tundras, and will, according to custom, stop here for several days on his way to winter quarters which, so far as scientists can determine, is simply the waves of the Pacific off the coast of Peru.

Carmel Important on Bird Map

These winter migrations through Carmel will continue from now until October with the loons, zinging by Cpress Point like something on a race track, passing in November.

First View of Carmel, Vintage 1903; Described by Jo Mora, Sculptor

The new picture map of Carmel by-the-Sea,, just brought out by Jo Mora, so accurately interprets the feeling of the early days of the community that the Pine Cone Cymbal asked him concerning the background that made possible his ability to pin down in amusing sketches that nebulous thing, the "spirit of old Carmel."

The answer is simple. Mora was here. And what he didn't see, he got from a conscientious study of records:

He can hark back to a summer's day in 1903—"It was almost forty years ago, and I was then a newcomer to California, traveling on the hurricane deck of my sorrel-tail pony, Lady.

I had ridden down over the border from San Diego to Velicata in Baja, California, from whence Portola and Serra had entered the unknown land in their march North in 1769. There I turned back and started my own jaunt to take in all the Franciscan Missions and Vistas on the old Camino Real, right up to San Francisco Solano in Sonoma. I endeavored to follow, in the minutest detail, the trail of those early Dons, and my guide for this

THE DOGS DO BARK

TRUDE ANN Tucker is having a wonderful time in Nyack, New York, where she is visiting with her mistress, Mrs. Leota Tucker, at the Clarcktown Country Club. She says the country around there is beautiful and that due to the gasoline shortage, she gets to take nice, long walks. TRUDE also confides that as historically interesting and beautiful as the Hudson is, it just can't compare with Carmel Beach and the Pacific Ocean.

TRUDE was delighted to see John Eaton, former Villager, who is playing at the Bell Tower Theater on the Country Club grounds, but was quite disappointed that he didn't have his puppet-dog, CAESAR, (who was TRUDE'S matinee idol when John and Mitzie had the puppet shows here) with him. However, TRUDE,, who always has an eye open for romantic adventure, has met enough attractive gentlemen on the trip to make things interesting.

That petite pair of traffic stoppers seen in the company of Mrs. Rose Greeley, are twins, CRICKET and MIDGET. Both are white, but CRICKET has one black ear, and MIDGET has one brown ear so that Mrs. Greeley can tell them apart. Their friends all agree that the reason CRICKET and MIDGET are twins is that they are just too cute to be one person.

Among the interesting visitors in town this week are JOAN Steers and DOTSY Green who are here for a few days with Mrs. H. R. Green of Palo Alto. JOAN, who is blonde and lovely, has been telling her Carmel friends about that epic 3100 mile trip her master, John Steers, Mrs. Green's son-inlaw, made from New Zealand last winter as co-pilot on the Pan - American Clipper. JOAN was awfully worried about him, but she said she knew he would get that plane home safely somehow because she had just received seven little Bundles from Heaven (all black) and he had promised to be there for the christening.

JERRY Hefling is a constant source of delight and amusement to tourists and townspeople alike as he nonchalantly does his daily shopping. He goes to the butchers, selects the kind of meat he wants, takes the package in his mouth, and trots off home with it.

MUGGINS Pinckard and her master and mistress, Mr. and Mrs. Eyre Pinckard, gave one of MUGGIN'S beautiful children to little Sheila Godwin for a birthday present. The youngster, whom MUGGINS whimsically calls "Pine Inn," is still too young to leave home, but in a few weeks will have finished her primary schooling and will be ready to join Miss Godwin. Incidentally, Sheila is thinking of changing the puppy's name. She feels it should be something more feminine.

GERRY Bassett's friends who miss seeing her friendly little face about the Village will be interested to know that she has gone up the Valley to live with her original owner, Rudy Bramer. Mrs. Bassett and Oliver are too busy now to give GERRY the care and attention they feel she should have, so they sent her up to Robles Del Rio where she will have children to play with, a lot of new territory to explore, and a whole new set of fascinating smells to investigate. Although GERRY says she is going to miss Mrs. Bassett and Oliver, her Carmel friends, and the beach, very, very much, she thinks she is going to enjoy being a country girl. "And just think how much fun it's going to be," she explains, "to come back to Carmel to visit."

That black wooly dog lying at the door on the opening day of the Soldiers' Art Exhibit was just the right touch. He certainly liked the show, too. Although he shyly refused to give his name, he heartily agreed that "they sure was mighty purty pitchers."

FESTIVAL PLAYERS WED

Paul Everett Taylor, son of the Ira D. Taylors of Carmel, and Evelyn Belle Ward were married Sunday in Mill Valley.

Paul is now a laboratory technician in the Sausalito shipyards but in former years he was one of the Bach Festival trumpeters and Evelyn Ward played the bass viol in the orchestra. Both Paul and his bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Ward of Mill Valley, are graduates of the College of the Pacific.

Miss Juanita Saxe of Mill Valley, a frequent visitor to the Peninsula, served as maid of honor at the wedding and Floyd Dinkel of Carmel was best man for his brother in law.

Candidate for Congress Aug. 25

FIGHTING MAD!

Too many Congressmen have let America down. A lot of us voters are fighting mad. Away with peanut politicians! Let Outland in! Big in body, he is a fearless, fighting he-man. Big in mind and soul he has the vision for right leadership.

Voters, here is a "natural" for these times. Outland is an authority in Government and International Relations. For his knowledge in those fields Harvard and Yale awarded him high degrees.

Again, Outland knows the good and bad of city government, for he was 7 years in social service work. And as an executive of the Federal Transient Service he learned why homes lose their hold on our youth. Nor is Outland ignorant of the problems of the farm, that backbone of California. He was raised on a Ventura County ranch by pioneers. Trained to serve you? Yes!

Says Outland to voters, "We must wage total War, win total Victory and seek total Peace." Could a man with a goal like that let us down? No!

Voters, how much do you want bigger men in Congress? Earnestly enough to help pay for more Outland ads? If so, mail check of any size to Willard W. Wheeler, Pebble Beach.

Bach Festival In Review . . .

Mozart Opera

By KATIE MARTIN

One of the most delightful events of the Bach Festival was Thursday night's performance of Mozart's "The Impresario," the concluding half of an all-Mozart program. Light comedy and lively pace, it was sung in English, translated by Erich Weiler, guest conductor. Appearing in the roles were Margaret Engel, soprano, Verna Osborne, soprano, Edgar Iverson, tenor, and Merwyn Dant, who though listed as a bass appears to have the upper register and timbre of a baritone. On a set designed by Franklin Dixon, the singers with their fine costumes sang and acted around the spinet loaned for the occasion by Mrs. W. H. Hargrave,, which gave a truly atmospheric touch.

As soloist on the program, Doris Ballard, seven years a participant in these festivals and a brilliant young violinist, played the A Major Concerto for violin and orchestra. She contributed a glowing beauty and strength to the Concerto, and her flawless musicianship at all times was an inspiration to her fellow orchestra members . . . both as soloist and as concert mistress.

One of the best known and loved Mozart compositions is the "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" which opened the evening's concert. Its four movements: Allegro, Romance, Minuet and Rondo each contain the essence of a slightly different music mood all woven and blended together beautifully. Mozart's oriental strains are preceded and followed by the more stately tempos of "state" themes and his fullbodied string music.

The Bach Festival is always a great source of pleasure to Carmel's music lovers and to the countless numbers of those who come to hear it each summer.

Gastone Usigli's sensitive, skillful conducting, and the variety in choice of music, have again thrilled us and imbued in us an even keener anticipation for the next summer series. Our deepest gratitude goes to Dene Denny and Hazl Watrous who have made possible eight wonderful Bach Festivals.

Coffee Cantata

By MARION HOWES

Saturday night's Bach Festival programme was a revelation of Bach in his most divergent aspects. First, in the Brandenburg Concerto No. III, we had Bach in the grand classical manner. The orchestra performed this with the rich volume and cleancut precision it has continually displayed this year. Next, Inez Lauritano confounded those who consider Bach too mathematical and unemotional by her interpretation of the Concerto in E major for violin and orchestra. Besides being lovely to look at and possessing a marvelous instrument, she played each note with intense feeling and had the power of the true artist to transfer that feeling to her hearers.

The Coffee Cantata was thoroughly secular, domestic and charming. It proved that Gilbert and Sullivan are also limbs of the tree that has its roots in the music of Bach. Simply staged by the bringing on of a brigtly colored coffee service on a redcheck covered table and picturesquely costumed by Rhoda Johnson, it was sung with full humorous appreciation by Merwyn Dant and smoothly introduced and directed by Julian Lieban.

The Cantata No. II, with full chorus, orchestra, and Peggy Turnley, Ruth Terry Koechig, Russell Horton and Merwyn Dant as soloists, brought us back to the heights and was a fitting climax to an evening of well rounded musical enjoyment.

Carmel may indeed be proud of this year's Bach Festival, which has been made possible by the faith and support of the community as a whole as well as by the individual labors of the participating musicians and Miss Denny, Miss Watrous and Mr. Usigli.

B Minor Mass

There is a futility in writing a review of Bach's B Minor Mass performed in the Carmel Mission last Sunday. This has always been the climax of the Bach Festival, and the public has been swarming to it and the critics piling up adjectives about it for years.

The truth is that it seems to produce a spell that is more than a compound of an excellently trained chorus and orchestra performing the supreme in religious music in a beautiful and appropriate setting. I believe that this comes largely from the accoustics of the Mission itself. The music swells around and in one, instead of being a separate thing—set upon a stage to be considered and judged.

This year's performance appeared to me the best I have heard. The chorus was superb in volume and unison, and the soloists, each pleasing in themselves, blended with it and the orchestra in a well rounded whole. The only thing that I could have wished different was the minor and irrevelant detail of desiring to see the soloists also gowned in white—thus removing a discordant note of individuality.

But as I started by saying, why quibble over what was a moving and beautiful experience. It should be accepted in that silence that came over us after the glorious sounds were stilled and before the great doors were thrown open to let us home in the deepening twilight. —Marion Howes.

Lectures and Organ Recitals

Two of the outstanding events of the Bach Festival which delight a discriminating minority each year are the lectures and the organ recitals. Alfred Frankenstein, lecturer and music critic, and Clarence Mader, organist, hold treasured niches in this year's Festival.

Mr. Frankenstein gave three lectures at an eleven o'clock hour on Thursday, Friday and Saturday morning in the auditorium. Mozart, miscellaneous composers, and Bach's B minor Mass were discussed in the scholarly brilliant way which is Alfred Frankenstein's. The casual wit, learned and sweeping comments of the eminent critic illuminate the evening concerts in a way that makes them doubly appreciated.

Alfred Frankenstein is considered one of the "charter members" of the Bach Festival, a permanent part of the Festival's growth and progress. Not only his lectures, but his advice, cooperation and unfailing interest are one of the invaluable contributions which help to make the Festival what it is and what it is to be.

At three and four o'clock on Wednesday and Friday afternoons, the organ hour brought untold delight to several hundred Bach visitors. Clarence Mader, heard for the first time on the Festival program, can easily be reckoned as one of the outstanding artists of the Eighth Annual Bach Festival and as pre-eminent among Pacific Coast organists. Not before have the Bach organ works been played with such impeccable technique, authority, and beauty of phrasing. Mr. Mader will be welcomed back again with eager enthusiasm.

All Saints' Church provides a fitting and lovely setting for the organ recitals. Mr. Mader's artistry and abilities left no regrets that the organ was smaller than the instrument he plays each Sunday in the First Presbyterian Church on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles.

Cansino Dancers Here in August

The Bach Festival is over, and the question being asked the Denny - Watrous Management is "What next?" In the way of entertainment that is unusual and exciting, Miss Denny and Miss Watrous are bringing the Jose Cansino Spanish Dance Group to the Sunset School Auditorium on Friday evening, August 14.

Jose Cansino is of a Spanish family of dancers famous for many generations. Several years ago the Denny-Watrous Management brought him here in one of the most successful of their many hundred presentations in Carmel. Continued demands for a repeat could not be satisfied as Cansino has been in Hollywood in pictures and in Mexico and various places.

However, arrangements have finally been completed and Jose Cansino in person, with his group, will be here in a sensational recital on August 14.

Carmen Morales is Cansino's new partner. Miss Morales comes from the Copacabana Casino in Rio de Janeiro, where she was their featured dancer. She was the bumboat girl in the recent film of O'Neill's "Long Voyage Home," and is also in "Panama Hattie," which is shortly to be released.

Other members of the Company are Lolita Lopez, jota dancer; Blanca Escalante, rumba singer, and Francisco Avellan, former pianist for Argentina and for Escudero.

Ticket reservations may be made through the Denny-Watrous Management at the Carmel Land Company on Ocean Avenue.

Red, White and Blue Eventually, We Hope

To help citizens to make the salvage drive a success in Carmel, Civilian Defense has placed three bins in the lot next to the post office—for rubber, tin cans and scrap metal.

Tin cans should be clean, have their ends turned in, be pressed flat and placed in cartons.

And now, Mrs. Cedric Rowntree, CD executive secretary, hopes someone will donate some red, white and blue paint.

Charming as a bustle . . . Yet modern as dancing bare legs! Haunting as an old tune . . . Yet arresting as a new one! And ravishing as the red-headed Rita! Rita Hayworth, America's No. 1 Red-head, has the year's most ravishing role as "My Gal Sal," 20th Century-Fox's musical answer to a million dreams. Victor Mature, John Sutton and Carole Landis are also starred. These nostalgic melodies, given a new and lavish setting in this streamlined musical extravaganza, will have all America humming. They have a power, activated by their use in this picture, which keeps feet tapping for weeks later.

The Wednesday and Thursday picture, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," is probably the most hilarious feast since the knife and fork were invented, for the play which rocked Broadway for two solid years is even more delightfully funny in the Warner Bros. screen version. The notable flock of guests is headed by Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, Monty ("The Man") Woolley and Jimmy Durante. William Keighley has directed the party with the deft comedy touch that has made him one of Hollywood's ace directors.

Hold your seats for the show which starts on Thursday and ends on Friday. A Good Woman. A Bad Woman . . . He needed the love of both! Lovely Ingrid Bergman and equally luscious Lana Turner are the women who "do things" to Spencer Tracy who portrays the dual role in M-G-M's "Dr Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Lana is seen as the fiancee of the brilliant young Dr. Jekyll. And Ingrid Bergman as Ivy, the captivating barmaid who arouses these "suppressed" desires which transform Jekyll into the cruel, sadistic Mr. Hyde. Hidden in the shadows of his mind — secret yearnings, mad longings for nameless adventures, and surrender to the fascination of a beautiful woman from another world. Also playing to make the evening complete is "Always in My Heart," which introduces the charming new fifteen-year-old singing star, Gloria Warren. Kay Francis and Walter Huston, with a featured cast that includes Frankie Thomas, six year old Patty Hale, who makes her screen debut in this picture and Borrah Minnevitch and His Rascals, the famed harmonica band. Hey! Kids! Don't forget that super Kiddies Matinee on Saturday afternoons, games, prizes. More color cartoons, just for you, Kids, so let's see your appreciation by going and having an afternoon of swell fun just for the regular price of a show.

Tatters Plays Another Week End

After a week's respite so that Gold Coast Troupers could attend the Bach Festival, "Tatters," the unending hilarious success, returns to the First Theatre in Monterey for two more weekends: this Saturday and Sunday evenings, and next,—August 1, 2, 8, 9.

Many visitors of former years are returning to the Monterey Peninsula during the summer months, who are eagerly making reservations for First Theater performances. "Tatters," with its sensational olio, promises more fun than ever before.

Louise Welty as Tatters, Dan Welty as "Mr. Ferris," Bob McMenamin as Phil Dolan and also as M. C., Jean Humphrey as Mrs. Timberlake, Peggy Mather as Mose, Roland Scheffler as Major Timberlake, Eddie George as Abe Witherspoon, Esther Gay as Clementina, Darwin as Kent and again as the Sheriff, and Dick Santa as Marston, the ill-fated speculator, furnish two hours of continuous merriment through melodrama and olio.

First Theatre tickets are on sale at Stanifords.

city this size, one pretty-good engine and one no-good one would be adequate, but not for Carmel.

The price we pay for our quaint redwood cottages under our picturesque pines is that of living in a first-class fire hazard. As a town, we have been acutely conscious of this for years and have made strenuous efforts to ameliorate the situation—the result, one of the finest fire fighting bodies of volunteers in the state.

But you can't fight a fire with your hands alone, no matter how willing and how well trained those hands may be, and that's what the volunteer fire department would be forced to do if confronted with an emergency and possessing only their present equipment, for under existing conditions, two fires at the same time in town would constitute an emergency. The pretty-good engine would be attending to one conflagration, and the other one would be stalled on the first incline on the way to the second fire. The fire department would be stymied.

I think we'd better vote the bond issue on August 18. And it isn't enough to nod the head in approbation as this is read. It is necessary to go to the poles and put that approbation on paper with a small x opposite "yes." Because it takes two-thirds majority to pass a bond issue. The "no" vote at any election has a way of turning out about 98 per-cent, whereas, the "yes" vote stays home on the assumption: "Oh, well, everybody's for it, so I don't need to bother."

Former bond elections that should have carried, have been defeated for this reason. This time we must take the trouble.

Carmel Boy Chosen For March of Time Photography School

T. G. Phillips, Jr., of Carmel, is one of the members of the U. S. Naval Forces selected to receive the special course of motion picture training instituted by The March of Time Studios in New York City. In consequence of his appointment, Phillips will study the techniques of news photography in an intensive six-month's course under members of The March of Time staff.

In anticipation of the demand for a force of trained service cameramen, the school prepares students for the task of making under actual field conditions a historical film record of the present war. In addition, graduates of the school are entrusted with the task of turning out for the instruction of the armed forces films covering every phase of military science.

Candidates for the school are selected by I. Q. and adaptation tests which eliimnate all but the six top men from each of the great U. S. Naval Training Stations. Tommy Phillips was one of the six chosen from the San Diego Naval Station.

Bluejackets Stage Sale

Carmel is to have a Thrift and White Elephant Sale next week, Friday and Saturday, August 7th and 8th, in Eustace former linen shop on Dolores Street near Ocean, sponsored by the Bundles for Bluejackets.

Such a great variety of wearing apparel has been contributed for the salvage sewing war needs, that is practically new and of fine quality the Bundles for Bluejackets will put them on sale and convert these lovely things into money instead of making them into other garments.

Those who may need to replenish their wardrobe will find a large selection of house dresses, in perfect condition, skirts, jackets, blouses, fine lingerie, hats, gloves and all sorts of accessories, besides beautiful evening gowns. All will be offered at Thrift prices.

This will not be a rummage sale, but a Thrift sale, where the various articles will be on display, at thrift prices to meet a thrift budget. There will be many other attractive features, as well.

A food table of delicious edibles made from special recipes; a potted plant booth, tables of beautiful costume jewelry, and oddments, new, some that have been seldom worn, and many other things to select from that are unusual, on the white elephant's tables.

Added to the Bundles for Bluejacket's diversified display will be a rare old painting in oils, by a noted Welsh artist. It is now on exhibit at Der Ling's Oriental Shop, Ocean and Dolores.

The sale will start at 10 o'clock. The Bundles for Bluejackets wish to thank the Peninsula citizens for their generous contributions to their Salvage work. It is hoped that the Thrift Sale will greatly add to these contributions for this great emergency.

Mrs. Oliver G. Kinney of Carmel, is spending a vacation at Hotel Del Mar.

sea as it does, is advantageously situated to serve as a resting and refreshment center for both land and sea birds.

Now the bright blue Lazuli Bunting, one of the gayest and probably most beautiful birds there is, may be found around the Mission and all over the Valley. They have been nesting here this summer, are scheduled for an early departure, in August or September.

The Lazuli buntings are known to ornithologists as summer visitors. The snipes and sandpipers will be arriving from Alaska within the next few days some of which will stay until spring. These are called winter visitors, while birds whose stop is as brief as the Phaladopes', are transients.

Nuthatches Creep and Twitter

One of the most adorable of birds—adorable even though Williams despises "sentimentalizing over the cute little birdies" — is the Pigmy Nuthatch and is now with us. These blue gray birds creep over the pine branches twittering continuously. They have upturned little bills which make super nut picks.

The remarkably regular migratory cycle, anything but an open book to scientists — sometimes becomes even more remarkable through being inexplicably upset. Last year, for instance, robins, which had previously seen Carmel only as winter visitors, decided capriciously to remain on the Peninsula to nest in the spring. Williams suggests that the increase in local lawns may have had something to do with this since more lawns mean in the bird world, more angle-worms for little robins.

"Birds can be erratic too," said Williams.

Bird of Good Omen

One of the glamour birds of the local air is the albatross, with a wing spread of eight feet. He can soar for hours at a time without a beat of his wings and yet manages to overtake and circle a fast ship. The local variety of albatross is a sooty brown, "very beautiful as it dips over the waves," says Williams, and can occasionally be seen from Cypress Point although for the best view one should take some suet and go out about five miles and he will soon have a cluster of albatross about his boat. They are very tame out there, Williams reports, and you can almost pet them.

The Owl Department

As for the whimsical and charming owl department, Carmel is well stocked, with small Sreech ols; with monkey faced, big Barn owls, the enormous Horned variety which has tufts of feathers that look like silly little ears, and, in the Valley, the Saw-whet owl, called so because somebody—not Williams—thought his call resembled the whetting of steel. Williams can reply to him so accurately that once a Saw-whet dived at him, apparently believing him to be a rival, and Williams had to jump.

But funny as owls may seem, the whole subject arouses deep feeling in Williams.

"Because owls are large," he said, "people believe them to be predatory — bird eaters — and think they are doing a good deed in shooting them. Actually when someone shoots a Barn owl, he is dispatching the gopher's worst enemy."

Owls Are Protected

All the owls, except the Horned, are protected by state laws but they aren't enforced so well as they might be, Williams states.

"All wild life has its place, so why destroy a species? Why should we criticize the predators when we are the greatest predators of all?

"Even hawks rarely eat birds. The Red-tailed hawk, which is so often shot, is the natural provision for keeping ground squirrels and meadow mice from becoming too numerous.

"Blue jays, which are not generally popular because from time to time they do unquestionably eat eggs in other birds' nests, do not destroy the species since predators never kill off their food supply."

The special pleasure of taking up birds as a form of recreation, as Williams points out, is that it doesn't cost anything. And it doesn't take any rubber since you can play at it in your own backyard.

Recently Williams took a walk around Carmel with Guy Emerson of New York—national president of the Audobon Society whose vocation is banking in Wall street—and they saw no less than 80 bird species in one day.

"Pop" Smith Goes Up-stage Under Protest

Some are born to dignity, some try to assume it. Here in Carmel is a man who had it thrust upon him this week and doesn't like it.

Cecil "Pop" Smith, Carmel's dog photographer and sometimes actor was exceedingly happy with his part of the soothsayer in the forthcoming Shakespeare Festival production of Julius Caesar, and then he discovered that Herbert Heron, director and producer, would not stand for the "Pop" part of the Smith name on the program.

"It would look incongruous on a Shakespeare cast of characters," said Heron.

"And without it," wailed Smith, "how will anybody know who I am?"

FEATURES

OF MEN AND BEASTS

By PHIL NESBITT

Here's a tale no one will believe. Up that great valley, the Carmel Valley, lives Harry Lachman and his wife. Harry is a finely tutored forest pathologist. Give him a microscope and he will detect the particular bug which afflicts the diseased tree in your yard. However, Harry is also a superlative woodsman and sportsman. He loves to fish for trout. He lives by the river's edge. He and his wife have been feeding the trout in the river's shallow depth until they come when Harry whistles. The trout have actually become tame. And, in a sense, are like ranch hands, in that they come trooping, or schooling, through the water when the dinner bell rings. Animals (and fish) apparently sense the presence of good will the very moment it is sent forth.

The author (myself) went fishing off the point beyond Mr. Flavin's spacious estate in the Highlands. There is a deep pool just off this point. The big gloomy fish from the outer deeps come finning in to sport about the pool. My line was out. I was bored with the lack of attention the fish were paying to the lush bait. Then, I felt a heaving, stolid tug. I forthwith hauled in a twenty pound ling cod. I stood and trembled (with excitement) for perhaps five minutes. It's excellent sport to fish, better sport to catch overweaned monsters.

The most upsetting event has happened. A scandal surrounding Mr. Bufano's statue. Perhaps I shouldn't say scandal; rather it may be called tragedy. No matter how revolutionary are the faces of modern works of art, they should be above desecration by the vandalistic element . . . . no matter what the cause. I don't know who took the head away. Who ever did so, was possessed of a technical knowledge of how to disengage it from the base. Poor Mr. Bufano! The devil of desecration appears to dog his efforts to create a new form for the world of art. It seems to be a stretch of the imagination to suppose there are criminals who would wilfully jeopardize their freedom by bothering to remove such works or art. Maybe it (the crime) will resolve itself in a mystery equalling that of—for example, the Marie Celeste, that sailing vessel found upon the high seas once, minus crew.

The good lady across the way had some excellent roses in her garden. Poor thing; she loved the roses. Last night several of those delightful appearing fauns from out Del Monte forest came to pay a call. Now the roses aren't. It is a little like living on a Carmel Mount Olympus (remember Walt Disney's Fantasia?). Here, instead of winged white and black equines, we have little-nocturnal-rose-eating deer. They don't fly, it is true, but they leap with the rarest grace; INTO YOUR GARDEN.

CABBAGES AND THINGS

By PLANTSMITH

In the several dozen garden pieces I've written during the past year, I have studiously avoided the inclusion of any commercial "plug" for SPOONIT. There have been times when I was strongly tempted at least to drop a hint, but somehow always resisted the impulse

Now I'm coming right out in the open and calling it by name; and no one can charge me with commercialism, either, for SPOONIT is finished; washed up "for the duration." The last batch has been mixed and the last can sent on its way to the dealer's counter.

The story of SPOONIT'S demise can be summed up in either of two little three-letter groups—"WAR" or "WPB". They both mean the same, which is just another three-letter word: "Out."

Perhaps I should pause here briefly to describe SPOONIT, just in case there may be two or three folks in Carmel who haven't heard about it. It's a greenish-colored plant food that comes in a bright yellow can with a cut showing a sunbonneted girl feeding her flowers from a sprinkling can. According to testimonials from garden fans, this spoon method of feeding makes plants literally go "boom." But, alas, it's another kind of "boom" it takes to send a shell on its aggression-busting way toward the Hitler and Hirohito camps. And since it appears it will take all the nitrogen this Country can produce to prepare gunpowder, we'll just have to ask our plants to tighten up their belts a notch or two until the war is over. Mayhap Mother Nature will come to the rescue and prepare plants for an indefinite period of suspended animation.

It is indeed with mixed feelings that I strive to phrase a fitting obituary for this, my chemical child. May I just say that SPOONIT attempted to provide a small share of extra cheer through the medium of smiling, happy flowers. My scrap book of letters and the memory of enthusiastic reports from folks who stop me on the street to relate "tall" stories shall always remind me of the happiest episode of a life time.

But hark! For several minutes I've been hearing a whispering sort of noise; indistinct and unintelligible. Now it's coming clearly. Of all things! The little girl on the front of the SPOONIT can is saying "See you after the war."

POETRY

NIGHT SONG

Pause but a moment,—you will hear the song
That breaks the darkness into jewelled light;
The mocking-bird now hangs its vibrant gems
Of music on the summer-scented night.

Pause but a moment,—you will hear the notes
Pendant upon the night's blue tapestry,
And he who listens to this mocking-bird
Forever hears its haunting melody.

—GRACE SAYRE.

REVERY

(Chinese Fragment)

Startled from my dream by a wandering gust
Of the mountain gale, I heard the waterfall,
And at the beauty of its music, wept.
A heavy mist covered the mountain sky,
Like the silken gray of a Mandarin's robe . . .
The cry of the mountain-birds
Came softly from young grass,
And then, stepping delicately down the steep path,
Came a young, white-dappled deer,
Slender and beautiful,
With dark eyes
Shining like black pools
Hidden among the mountain places . . .
I will tarry here until the white moon
Shines through the pine branches.

—ELEANOR ALLEN.

MESQUITE

Mesquite, acacia's desert cousin,
Has fragile leaves and ragged yellow blooms,
Through which the splintered sunlight falls
On lazy lizards, lying at their ease,
Protected by its thorns
And by their own chameleon powers.
The careless branches, scarce a finger's width
Are nourished to withstand the burning heat
By huge brown roots as large and strong as cobras.

—GERTRUDE HELEN CRAWFORD.

SERMON IN STONES

Along the lake shore all day I collected
The stones for building up the winter wall:
Flat stones with corners, carefully selected
To shape the hurdles where the winds must fall;
All day along the lake shore I conspired
To gather rocks, like words a sage assorted
For telling wisdom, with two hands inspired
To rear my snares so that the winds be thwarted.

And when my harvest of the rocks was done,
When each was set within its proper place,
I wondered, as I watched the waning sun,
How many other men had dared to brace
Stone walls against the winds, only to know
That they had slaved their day in Jericho.

—CARL JOHN BOSTELMANN.

POETRY EDITOR—HELEN COOLIDGE

REVIEWS

ABOUT OURSELVES

Most of us associate the various "ologies" with old bones and a musty smell. It requires a smart writer to bring alive and make exciting zoology, the boniest and mustiest of the lot. James G. Needham is a smart writer.

His new book, About Ourselves, "A survey of human nature from the zoological viewpoint," illuminates man's behavior by showing his animal kinship, tracing his physical, emotonal and mental development. It contains such chapters as Development of the Nervous System, Instinct, Infancy, etc.

The second section, dealing with man's behavior as a social animal discuses: "The role of instinct in human affairs," "War in its biological aspects," "Government in its biological aspects," and "Religion in its biological aspects."

In the process of bringing zoology alive, Dr. Needham has called in the assistance of phychology, anthropology, physiology, sociology, and several other miscellaneous ologies I am not prepared to pin down at the present moment. The result is not zoology, but the story of man, and an interesting story it proves to be in the hands of a sound scientist and able writer who warms his facts with philosophy, brightens them with humor and presents them so simply and clearly that they are understandable and interesting to the layman for whom the book was primarily written.

"Our chief joys in life are the free gifts of Mother Nature. Our worst troubles are ills of our own creation. Surveying the present world conditions, we are shocked to see our most potent knowledge turned to destructive ends. Perhaps it is dangerous for us to know so much about control of the external world forces without knowing more about the impulses that control our own lives."

That is his opening paragraph foreshadowing his purpose which he accomplishes admirably.—Wilma Cook.

Salute to Addie, Oldest-youngest Member of Staff

This month, the oldest-youngest member of the Pine Cone Cymbal staff celebrated her seventh anniversary with Carmel's twenty-seven year old weekly.

Adaline "Addie" Guth is the oldest member of the staff in weekly appearances on the pay roll. No one, including the boss himself, has been here longer. She is youngest in point of years, as she celebrate dher seventeenth birthday July 26.

It was in connection with her birthday that The Pine Cone first had the good fortune to acquire Addie. She was approaching her tenth birthday and she wanted a party. Her mother didn't think so, not this year, at any rate. Addie wanted to know if she got a job and earned the wherewithal to finance a birthday party, then could she have one, please?

Mother said "yes", wondering where this not yet ten - year - old would get a job. Addie came to the Pine Cone and asked Ross and Thelma Miller, then owners and editors, if she could join the flock of Pine Cone paper boys. She sold the July 12 issue, and the next and the next, and she had her birthday party. She kept on with her paper sales, building up a string of "regulars" until she was selling forty to fifty papers each issue.

Then she was promoted to a job in the shop wrapping papers to go out on the mail routes. She took on new duties: helped in the office, edited a little column under the pseudonym, Kay Lee, assisted Bonnie Cockburn in laying out advertising, took over supervision of the complicated circulation department, and found time on the side to attend high school and graduate this spring.

Having had a hand at almost every task a weekly newspaper has to offer, Addie chose advertising as her specialty and is now the blonde member of the Pine Cone Cymbal's two-girl advertising team.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

"Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." These words from II Corinthians comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, August 2, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Love."

Included among the Scriptural selections will be: "And it came to pass, when Joseph was come unto his brethern, that they stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours, that was on him; And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it," (Gen. 37:23, 24).

The following passage from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "At all times and under all circumstances, overcome evil with good. Know thyself, and God will supply the wisdom and the occasion for a victory over evil. Clad in the panoply of Love, human hatred cannot reach you," (p. 571).

Usigli Admires Portrait, and Gets it as Gift

The portrait of Usigli hanging in the Sunset Auditorium lobby during the Bach Festival week which caused so much favorable comment is to be given to the Usiglis by the the artist

Celia B. Seymour is a member of the Bach Festival chorus, and it was while working under Usigli that she received the impressions she incorporated in her drawing.

In speaking of the story behind the portrait, Miss Seymour says:

"I felt so strongly his musicianship, his great force in the direction of his orchestra and chorus, his winning smile, and above all, his yearnings to express the great beauty of tone of which he is the master. Perceiving this, I had to make sketches of his forceful face. I tried to put it in a simple drawing, using red chalk, as my favorite medium. Usigli, busy as he was, gave me one Wednesday afternoon to pose. I seemingly gathered the feeling of his countenance, and he and Mrs. Usigli were so pleased with what I had accomplished, that after exhibiting the portrait, I want to give it to them as an expression of my appreciation of what he has done for Carmel."

HIGHLIGHTS FROM HAWAII

From out of the silence beyond Diamond Head to the Pine Cone office comes Hickam Highlights, an amusing weekly put out by the enlisted men of Hickam Field.

Featured in it are such columns as Gooney Bird gossip, Featrice Barefacts and many cartoons.

A recent issue tells the story of a man in the supply department who, as an understudy waits for his opportunity to play the lead, had waited and yearned to become a fireman. For six years he had moved about in the Army but on December 7 he was still in the supply department. Then his chance came and he proved himself such a good fire fighter that he was decorated and is now fireman for keeps.

Evacuees See Carmel

How Carmel seems to evacuees was told The Pine Cone this week in a note from Mrs. Gail Mills Dimmitt of Los Angeles.

"I must tell you how much we have enjoyed our stay in peaceful Carmel," Mrs. Dimmitt writes. "I took a cottage, 'Ivy Gate,' to be here for the Bach Festival and brought my daughter, Mrs. V. A. Fabris and babes from San Francsico for the week. We recently were evacuated from Honolulu and the quiet of Carmel is delightful.

"Two musical friends, Mrs. Ruth Somerindyke of Los Angeles and Lydia Boothby from San Jose State, have been with us for the concerts. We have been so pleased. We are staying on a while."

and treacherous assailant, Michael Abbott a strong, bluff Metellus, Cecil Haskell a suave Trebonius, Cecil Smith a strikingly prophetic Soothsayer, Fred Robbins a delightful old Cobbler, Alec Gibson a sonorous Cinna.

Maxine Chevalier, a player of charm and intelligence, presents a beautiful portrait of Servius, the boy who brings to the conspirators the peace offering of Antony. Lucius, the small attendant of Brutus, is played by Eric Short, whose father played the shepherd Alberon, companion to Herbert Heron's David, in the inaugural performance in the Forest Theater in 1910.

Barbara Stitt is Portia, the wife of Brutus. She has played a wide range of parts in Carmel, and has never failed to score. Wilma Bott portrays Calpurnia, the wife of Caesar, with fire and dignity.

Minor roles are taken by Clark Wallace, Fritz Wurzmann, Lillian Locke, Marie Fonteneau, Edward Filpula and Paul Gosney.

Director Heron has designed a beautifully simple production, devoid of time-consuming frills. The stark splendor of the play will have every opportunity to be heard and enjoyed. Stage decoration, reduced to essentials, is in charge of Ann Millis, assisted by Fred Locke and H. F. Dickinson. Costumes, designed by Helena Heron, are being made by Iva Rogers. This clean-cut, streamlined version, beginning each evening at seven-thirty sharp, will end at nine o'clock. There is ample parking space inside the safely-fenced Forest Theater grounds for all who wish to drive to the performance. Otherwise it is three very short blocks walk out Mountainview Avenue from the corner of the park.

Are you doing your part in the National Nutrition Program, and do you know how?

The Carmel Chapter of the Red Cross, Mrs. J. E. Abernethy, Nutrition Chairman, and Mrs. Robert Sprouse, Secretary, announce new Nutrition Classes will start August 5th, hours 2-4, at Red Cross Chapter House on Dolores Street, with Mrs. Bernard Schulte as instructor.

Surveys made by government agencies have shown that 45,000,000 Americans, approximately one-third of our population are not receiving the proper foods.

A great responsibility rests with the homemaker. She must select and prepare the proper foods and educate every member of her family to eat well balanced meals.

This is an exceptional opportunity for all Carmel women who enroll, as Mrs. Schulte is well qualified to make this course interesting and exceedingly valuable.

Register now at Red Cross Headquarters.

The War Production Room of the Carmel Chapter, American Red Cross, announces that there will be no more wool for the knitting of Civilian or Refugee garments.

The request is made that all unfinished garments be completed and brought in as soon as possible so a shipment can be made, and the way made clear for a large shipment of yarn for Army and Navy work which is expected soon. All knitters please watch the papers for notice of its arrival.

In the meantime there is plenty of work in the Production Room for all who wish to help. The Kit Bags which the War Department has stressed as being so very urgent are being made now, and work continues on large quotas of refugee sewing.

Rosicrucian Returns

Mr. William G. Bishop of Tenth and Dolores has just returned from the AMORC Rosicrucian convention in San Jose where he saw synthetic opals, rubies and topaz, valuable for industrial use, which he said had been reproduced from deciphered alchemical processes.

Mr. Bishop relates that advanced chemistry students of the Rose-Croix University, an affiliate of AMORC, found that the allegorical and symbolic phraseology of the alchemists, such as the writings of Paracelsus, contained startling practical formulas.

Anne Tracey McCawley Arrives

A daughter was born to Major and Mrs. John C. McCawley last Saturday at the Peninsula Community Hospital.

Jennie Coleman, Pioneer, Passes

(From Pasadena comes the following saddening news of a Carmel pioneer.)

By MRS. J. D. JOHNSTON

Mrs. Jennie Coleman passes to her home beyond.

Loved by hundreds in Carmel, over the period of years she was a resident—and always after a loyal booster for our own Carmel —Jennie Coleman waves a hand Goodbye.

"Give everyone my love," she told a friend, five days before her passing. We who knew her here, are indeed fortunate to have known her and seen the strength of her character, and her extreme loyalty to her friends.

Jennie Coleman was born in New York City, August 20, 1860. Hr early life was spent there, she and her husband moving to Denver, Colorado, soon after their marriage. Three children came into the home, but they, as well as her husband were taken from her after a very few years, so that her life was mainly a lonely life, though not felt to be so by her friends, as she seemed to have an inner strength.

Coming to Carmel in 1907, she grew to be a part of it, and it a part of her. Some of us coming from year to year, found her managing owner of the Candy Kitchen, later owned by Mr. Curtis. Then later a familiar figure along Ocean Avenue to and from her Real Estate office, where she was able to find a place for everyone, and such a pleasure it was to her.

On Monday, July 20, her friends paid loving tribute to her at a beautiful service in Forest Lawn Memorial Park, in Glendale, where her favorite flowers in blankets, sprays and plaques, made the otherwise saddened room, a place of beauty.

To the Editor

Editor, Pine Cone-Cymbal:

At the unveiling of the Bach statue in the park on Tuesday night after the concert I was thrilled with the suave dignity of the figure against our own Carmel background of trees and the beautiful flecked sky of that night—the head of blue green and body of a bronzed, tapestry-like color in the dim light.

There were many divided opinions I heard from those assembled, but that is Carmel, you know. But on Saturday morning to find that the statue had been wrecked, head stolen, and by whom—. In the time I have lived in Carmel, more than thirty years, I have yet to hear of a more dastardly trick to be played upon our community. Strange things do seem to happen.

Tryout Success at Del Monte

By ELIZABETH PAINE

A bright, enjoyable comedy with a good cast, "Keep Your Distance," a try-out, closed the Del Monte Theatre Sunday night and proved to be the most interesting of the three productions offered.

While the play had several unfinished edges at beginning and end, its lively spirit and many laughs easily made up in the first try-out for those unpolished spots. Large audiences last week-end, and their enthusiastic reception, testify to the interest the Peninsula takes in such a trial.

Delightful incongruities of character and situation pervade "Keep Your Distance," the chief being the entanglement of a mild, kindly, big game taming scientist with a violently tempermental actress. The student of zoology is entreated to tame the lady by her producer who points out that the scientist may afterwards lay her chinchilla cape out beside his Nubian lion skin.

The action includes such foolery as hauling a cage into a penthouse room and locking up first one of the principals and then the other. A very funny sequence is conjured up when the monster body guard is hypnotized by the scientist and made to hop about the stage like a kangaroo.

While the characters are not outstandingly original, they are enough so to hold the attention, even to the very sentimental butler. And the lines keep a high average humor for such an unpretentious comedy.

Since the play leans heavily on the character of the scientist, George Banyai was fortunate to secure Ian Keith for the part. He gave a human, authoritative, faintly whimsical performance. K. T. Stevens, young and most attractive, was likewise a good choice for the actress although she was not so smooth as she will doubtless become by September when "Keep Your Distance" opens in San Francisco.

At the last moment a local girl, Agnes Fraser, stepped into the second lead and gave a creditable performance which was in spots extremely effective.

Robert H. Harris, the play's director, took the part of the producer and was suitably amusing as were P. J. Kelly, the butler, Fred Clark, the body guard, and Jimmy Heisinger, the scientist's mischievous young brother.

Before the San Francisco opening, we should like to see something beside Deus ex Machina pop up in the middle of the third act with a briefcase to solve the big problem.

What To Do In An Air Raid

By DR. WARD L. MOULD
Medical Gas Officer
U. S. Office of Civilian Defense

(This is the fifth of a series of six articles about war gases, their characteristics, and measures the civilian can take to protect himself against gas injury).

V—You Can Protect Yourself

This article will present a few simple rules by which injury by war gases may be prevented or modified. If mustard or lewisite are used, the most serious injuries will result from the liquid agent. Therefore, during a raid, remain inside, or go inside if you are out of doors.

Remember that war gases are heavier than air, and will cling to the ground. You can get away from the vapor by avoiding basements and other low places. Even after a raid, it is better to remain inside a building than to try to leave the gas area unless so directed. Your air raid warden will guide you to safety when it is safe for you to move.

BASIC RULES IN A GAS ATTACK

1. Self-aid is the BEST aid for the prevention of injuries due to war gases. War gases are usually not dangerous if you take steps immediately to remove them from the skin and eyes. Effective means to accomplish this are in the kitchen and bathroom of every home.

3. If you are inside a building, remain there and go upstairs. Do not leave your house unless it is absolutely necessary. If you are outsied and not able to get indoors immediately walk—don't run—to get out of the gas area. Avoid puddles of liquid gas, basements, valleys and other low places.

3. If you have been exposed to a war gas—

a. Breathe through cloths wet with baking soda solution.

b. Get inside a building if possible, but first remove your outer clothing and leave it outside.

c. Wash your hands first, and then your face, with laundry soap and water.

d. After cleaning your hands, wash your eyes at once with a large amount of a solution of baking soda; one teaspoonful of baking soda in a glass of water.

e. Take a bath, using plenty of laundry soap.

f. Wash your eyes again with baking soda solution.

4. If splashes of liquid gas have gotten on you—

a. Using small pieces of cloth, cleansing tissues or toilet tissue, blot up as much of the liquid as you can, being careful not to spread it.

b. Daub the contaminated area with cloths wet with bleaching solutions containing sodium-chlorite, such as, Clorox, etc.

c. Follow directions b ,c, and d in 3 above.

5. NEVER GET EXCITED. Lie down and cover yourself with a blanket. Medical aid is on the way. There is no immediate serious danger from exposure to any known war gas.

(Next week: The Anti-Gas Organization in Our City).

was that priceless bit of Americana, Crespi's Diary. Mine was an old typewritten copy in Spanish, given to me by my friend, the late Charles F. Lummis. It had not as yet been published en toto, translated into English and in book form. I identified most of his camping sites, so concise and clear are his descriptions. Throughout this diary, the one objective was to find Vizcaino's glorious harbor of Monterey; and, naturally, my own thoughts were tuned along the same line, and looking forward to my first squint of the Carmel Mission, which was the early headquarters of that Mission chain, and where Serra died and was buried.

I camped several days at the deserted old Mission of San Antonio, making my sketches, painting and gathering material. It was then one of the most picturesque of the whole chain, as the outbuildings and beautiful arches were still standing. One day a couple of Indian vaqueros and a boy dropped into my camp, as picturseque a trio as I had seen in many a day. As I remember it now, they spoke but little English, and when they found I savvied their noise, we got along wonderfully. Anyhow, I sent the boy back with a note to the storekeeper at Jolon and some money, and I gave them a dinner party around my camp fire that night. The cookies, candy and soft drinks which figured in the menu set me back a couple of dollars, which was some party. Anyhow, to make a long story short, some days later when I pulled out, instead of trailing to the Salinas River and the roundabout route, the boy, whose name was Cayetano, guided me in a direct way through some of the roughest mountain trails you'd want to ride. Sometimes we'd ride along a ridge with the broad Pacific to our left, and then we'd wiggle and scramble and slide through as wild a bit of range as you could imagine. My first experience in the Santa Lucias. But we took it easy and idled along, 'till one midmorning we topped a hogback, and Cayetano reined up, lolled forward in the saddle, and pointed away and below us. "Alli esta la Mision. Que le Parece?"

Well, Glory Hallelujah! At last was I agazing at the Promised Land! A glorious panorama stretched before me. It was one of those days we sometimes get here: quite cloudless, yet with that curious haze that makes for a visibility that's telescopic. Point Lobos reached out towards the left; Pescadero Point at the distant right; Carmel Bay denting in between. The green river course meandered down to its mouth. A few little brown spots on a dry, tawny terrain . . . that was La Mision San Carlos Borromeo del Rio Carmelo.

I camped by the river for several days, and when I was through with my studies, I rode down to the beach and jogged along a stretch, then rode up the hill till I saw a few buildings in the pines. I had planned on stopping at Monterey next, so I turned back to beach and kept on to the Cypress groves I had heard much about.

This was my first squint of this locality, and I little dreamed that I would return twenty years later to erect at the Mission the Bronze and Marble Sacophagus of Father Junipero Serra. And, nearly forty years later, to make this cock-eyed Map and History of a town that hadn't taken root as yet, and was to grow and become famous in the interim. Sic transit gloria mundi!"

Police Deal With

had to put out their wienie-roast fires on the beach. There were the inevitable nervous people who telephoned in about prowlers when the neighbors or the neighbors' dogs rustled the brush in taking a short cut through the backyard.

Tidbits of the month were the negress who took a pot-shot at her husband because it looked as if her "honey-lamb" was going to falk out on her; the college student who tried to carry off the mats at the Pine Inn for souvenirs, and the barefoot thief with an eye for beauty who passed up a sport coat, slacks with real money in the pocket in an unlocked car and made off with a pair of hot-cha tan and white oxfords and socks, size 8½.

:—TO LATE TO CLASSIFY—:

AFTER August 1, R. H. Harnisch will no longer be connected with the service department of the Carmel Garage. I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by him prior to this date. L. H. Levinson.

Young Officer Shows Feeling for His Responsibility

Something of the spirit with which the men of the country are serving, and the sense of responsibility of the young officers of the citizen army, can be seen from the letter recently received by Mrs. Willis G. White from her son in a southern training camp.

"We have been working like the dickens here training men," he writes. "It is steady going from five-thirty in the morning until eleven or twelve o'clock at night, and in as much as it means training these men so that they can go out and take their places alongside those others in Australia, China, Ireland and England, there is no small amount of responsibility connected with the job. I only wish I could have an additional twelve hours every day. These men are going to be out there fighting before long; and how well we teach them, determines how long they and their comrades will live. You cannot overlook the smallest detail with them, as that one small thing may well be the difference between victory or defeat. One small item overlooked in one man's training can mean just that much.

"I hope before long to be able to be going with them to take my place beside those others who have gone before." William Gail.

Letter Assures

Bough theatre which, though it would require considerable remodeling, could be made to serve the purpose.

Several days later a letter came to the Pine Cone Cymbal from La Jolla where J. W. Getsinger, director of adult education for Carmel, is vacationing. It contained an offer which the committee believes has more practical aspects than Kuster's though they are grateful to the latter for his good will.

Getsinger writes:

"As soon as the Carmel Adult school opens its fall session, I think we can care for the soldier's art workshop which you suggested in your editorial of the 24th. In fact, maybe we can do it now.

"Mrs. Cunningham has her life drawing class in room 11 at Sunset School on Monday and Wednesday evening. The soldiers will be welcome there. They may have instruction or not as they wish, a place to work and a place to show their work and compare it with others. If there is need for this to be open every evening, or at other hours, I think we can handle it.

"I will be back about August 25th, and will be glad to take over the details then."

Carol Steinbeck, one of the members of the committee, on being appraised of the offer, enthusiastically accepted it, and notified the Fort Ord Panorama staff so that they could publicize the Monday and Wednesday art classes that are immediately available, and pass on the promise of facilities and classes for other crafts that will be available after Getsinger returns.

She said that Art and National Defense would furnish any equipment that might not be available through adult education funds, and that there was a strong possibility that a down-town show room could be rigged up in one of the vacant shops later in the season.

40 MILE SPEED LIMIT

CHANGES BUS SCHEDULES

EFFECTIVE JULY 1st

TO COOPERATE FULLY with the national rubber conservation program, Greyhound is reducing bus operating speed. This necessitates changes in arrival and departure times of buses.

Today the important thing is to make every bus work full time—keeping vital traffic on the move. To achieve this purpose Greyhound is introducing many other changes—diverting buses to more essential routes—eliminating express and limited schedules as well as many "second sections"—unifying service with other bus companies in some cases—conserving tires and vital materials in every way.

Be sure to ask about the new schedules before you take a trip. We hope you will not be inconvenienced, crowded or delayed. But if you are, please be lenient—the war effort comes first!
